

The Internet is a great source of information and entertainment for many people. Nowadays personal websites are becoming increasingly popular because they have a lot of benefits. Firstly, many people maintain personal web pages because they are the most effective medium to express their opinions that, otherwise, simply would not have an outlet. Secondly a great number of people and business create and run websites because they are considered crucial to successful businesses nowadays, offering an assortment of advantages to help businesses become more widespread and profitable. What is more, websites can be a useful tool of education. Teachers can help pupils with homework and post assignments, tests or quizzes. Sites also serve to foster teacher-parent communication. Parents can ask questions without having to meet teachers face to face. On the other hand, some users are worried about data theft and viruses. The problem is that many people give too much personal information that may be passed to third parties for different purposes. However you can protect your privacy by choosing who can view your profile or contact you. To sum up, the Internet is rapidly spreading globally, along with the number of people who want to create a site of their own.