Speaker 1

A movie camera or video camera takes pictures very quickly, usually 25 pictures every second. When a movie projector, a computer, or a television shows the pictures at that rate, it looks like the images on the screen are moving. Sound is either recorded at the same time, or added later. The sounds in a movie usually include the sounds of people talking, music, the sounds of activities that are happening in the movie.

Speaker 2

Movies can make profits in the hundreds of millions, be they dollars, euro or pounds. In India movies have become an enormous part of the economy. The industry has always been dominated by quite a small number of major studios, like MGM, Warner, Columbia or Paramount. There are many large companies that provide all of the services needed to make movies, such as special effects, lighting, set building.

Speaker 3

Movies with famous stars and large budgets are designed to have a wide appeal, so that hopefully millions of people will pay to see them. Special effects can add a huge amount to the cost of a film. Today some films can cost up to 200 million dollars to make. But when you imagine that very successful films can make many times that amount in profit, it easy to see why the studios keep producing them.

Speaker 4

In blockbuster movies, there is usually a happy ending, in which all of the problems in the plot are figured out or fixed and almost everyone live happily ever after. Some films have been so successful that the studios keep releasing more and more films with the same characters and basic plots, for example the James Bond films and Star Wars.

Speaker 5

Some movies are made by small companies, or even just a small group of people that do not have much money. Films like this are very unusual and usually become popular "underground". People tell each other about it, so that they become cult, or popular but not mainstream. Independent movies often tell more creative stories, or may have sad endings that do not appeal to the big studios, because they cannot be sure how the public will react to them.
