The World of Love

"No one in the world can take the place of your mother..." (Harry S. Truman)

"Hello, my Mom! I know you missed me, dear.

Forgive again and give a kind smile.

We are alone; no one is near here...

I've come to you, my darling, for a while.

Of course, I ought to visit you more often

To share my affairs at a go

In order to make private problems soften ...

'A fault confessed is half redressed', you know.

Why are you silent? Here are the flowers;

They are so tender, beautiful and fresh!

I hope they'll keep on living for some hours.

You'll catch the subtle fragrance in a flesh...

Who is to blame I have no chance to kiss you,

To cuddle up against your gentle cheek,

To whisper in your ear 'I do miss you'?!

The hopeless thoughts have made me badly sick...

You didn't see when I became a mother

And didn't hold grandchildren on your knees...

Just think they are the adults! You would rather

Communicate with them today at ease!

I greatly wish my children knew you better.

They were deprived of their granny's heat.

And it is not a bit a laughing matter...

You would have helped to put them on the feet.

I'll soon be at the age you went forever...

No one but God knows how my grief is deep.

The separating distance let me never

Find out so much strength to take a leap..."

The even number of the freshest flowers,

Despondent hush, Mom's image on the stone

Develop isolated world of ours...
The World of Love which I forever own!

Dear Zalina Mihailovna!

Your poem is as sad as mine, you admitted it right. But your poem is written much more skilfully. I admire your English and your poetic style!

Thank you very much! I want to write my own poem devoted my mother but can't find necessary words to reveal my feelings. I'll also soon be at the age my mother went forever 21 years ago...Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you!

Dear colleague!
It doesn't matter whether you can write verses or not!
I do believe, that the main thing is, our mums live in our hearts! Our lives are the continuation of their lives on the Earth!
Every day we commensurate our behavior with their evaluation.
It means that they still direct us to the goodness and justice...
Let the New Year bring you happiness and joy!

I remember that your sonnet attracted my attention some time ago. And now I see your great work again. You are so talented!! You are a wise woman, a good teacher and a brilliant poet!! In spite of the fact that your poem is rather sad it makes us think about our life, our children, our mothers. I admire you a lot!!!

Dear Elena Alexandrovna!

I was very pleased to read your comment regarding my poetic work.

Praise, exactly like the criticism from colleagues, is highly valuable for me.

Many thanks to you for your understanding and support!
