“There took place war.”

The terrified and bloody war took place,
The stories of old people are still full of war that met in face
It seems to me then: its world Euclidean not -
The world so strange we're brought.

I thought, life is simple and is long so much,
But life is short and isn't simple as a tender touch.
And I go through myself as if an archeologist,
Have got to deepest bottom of my layer gist...

I would fill up to wounded throat by all I've worried
All those sufferings that drove crazy,
Was hold apart, was broken as if a cup
Through terrible furrows' soil that bored.

There the words that were floating
As at timber rafting the logs had rushed
People! I can't any more to be silent cause words' rotting
I beg about only word to tell you – please, listen, oh, God!

I would demand. Oh, be so kind and let me say
Before a crowd or when I am alone.
I was exhausted. I'd try to open the depth of chasms,
That opened to me in seventeen as baring drams.

I don't wish anything - no more.
I would pay with my own forces.
It's very great award I'd bring as crosses!
And suddenly there is a word inside
That will demand the birth on light.
