They come in dreams
68 years had already gone away
But we remember them again and again,
The terrible 4 years of the 2nd World War,
When millions of people couldn't open their houses' door.

Their wives and children, their parents and loves
They all together became orphans at once.
Their weddings had been never watched by anyone
No beautiful flowers appeared for them behind of a barn.

They can only hear the bark of the guns.
They can only see their relatives by a seldom chance.
If their dreams let them to come during the nights,
To be living in dreams –
That's their only right!

We have no right to forget our grands!
We must write about it with our modern pens!
Our modern gadgets can't substitute that,
What they have done for us,
And it was great!
